True or False

As heard at the regional consultations on the classification criteria for hotel establishments held by the CITQ in recent months.

The classification criteria for hotel establishments favour large hotels.

False An establishment is classified on the basis of the quality of its facilities, the number of services offered and its level of upkeep and cleanliness, not on its size or number of units. The CITQ's statistics show that there are small hotels (fewer than 40 rooms) at all classification levels. In Quebec, 21% of 5-star hotels and 17% of 4-star hotels are small establishments.

The classification criteria for hotel establishments favour urban hotels.

False A number of the classification sections take account of features specific to urban centres or resorts. This is true particularly of outdoor landscaping, services and on-premises activities. Some criteria apply more to resorts and establishments catering to pleasure travel, while others more frequently apply to urban and business settings, creating a balance between the different situations. Just as consumers do, the CITQ evaluates bedrooms and bathrooms in the same way whether the establishment is in the city or the countryside.

The classifier's judgment and tastes play an important role in classification.

False Classification is based on hundreds of criteria that are measured objectively. The size of the bed, the number of chairs, the amount of storage space, bathroom fixtures, towels and bedding are just some examples of the criteria that cannot be evaluated subjectively by the classifier. Only part of the evaluation – the establishment's appearance (cleanliness and upkeep) – depends on the classifier's judgment.

What do consumers think about bonus elements in hotel establishment classifications?

As part of the review of classification criteria for hotel establishments, we conducted an unofficial survey of consumers. One of the questions we asked was intended to determine which are the most popular bonus elements among people who travel mainly in Quebec.

See inside for information on preferences among respondents who stay at 3- or 4-star hotels.

Insurance

ADVERTORIAL

An insurance agent or broker? Which is right for you?

A recent survey by Quebec's financial markets regulator (AMF) revealed that few consumers understand the difference between what an insurance agent and an insurance broker do. It is essential that you be absolutely comfortable with your choice, though, when you are entrusting someone with part of your financial wealth, property or company. That is why it is important to know the main differences between an insurance agent and an independent insurance broker.

An insurance agent, licensed by and working for a single insurer, sells only the products offered by his or her employer. In other words, customers' needs must be fitted to the products available. An agent is rarely involved in settling claims or customer service, but instead concentrates mainly on signing up new customers. Customers have to settle their claims directly with the insurer, which can often be difficult when they have little knowledge of the industry and few sources of information.

An independent broker, on the other hand, has access to several insurers and so can offer a product that meets customers' specific needs. Brokers are also involved at every step along the way, mainly in settling claims – the whole point of an insurance contract. Brokers are customers' allies, advising them and guiding them to obtain a fair settlement. They make sure that customers obtain everything they deserve from insurers, even when they are not fully aware of what they are entitled to.

So what is the best way to buy insurance? If you listen to advertisements, buying insurance is a simple step; in fact, however, much hinges on that decision. Talking about regular or extended policies can be very confusing if you don't know the differences between them and what they cover. Many people feel very comfortable buying insurance, but will things be so simple if there is an accident and a claim? In the event of an accident involving injuries or death, there is no way that customers can handle such claims themselves. Your independent insurance broker is the logical choice!

As this year winds to an end, I would like to wish you all a very happy holiday season and a happy, healthy and prosperous New Year. This is also an appropriate time to talk about the CITQ's remarkable achievements in 2010.

Bringing all aspects of tourist accommodation classification certification together in one place was certainly one of the CITQ's major accomplishments this year. The XENIOS™ computer system set up by the CITQ at the request of Tourisme Québec simplifies all the steps involved in obtaining and renewing classification certificates as much as possible.

This year saw our marina classification and Éco-marina agreements renewed, along with new mandates under the Green Key and RéserVert programs and the upcoming classification mandate for golf courses. Other development plans now in the works should also lead to some exciting announcements in the near future.

In 2010, the CITQ also undertook a broad consultation on the classification criteria for hotel establishments. This is the first step in the process of updating these criteria, involving hundreds of operators and consumers. I would like to take this opportunity to thank them all most warmly for their input.

My thanks also to the CITQ staff for their professionalism and commitment, to all our business partners for their trust in us, to all my colleagues on the Board for their involvement and, lastly, my very special thanks to all the operators we visit, for their gracious co-operation.

Once again, allow me to offer my best wishes for 2011 to one and all!

OUR PLANNING SERVICE

An efficient tool for improving your classification results

Free if it is provided over the telephone, but with a charge if it is provided on your premises or at our offices. The CITQ's planning service has proven its worth for many operators.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

- 1 The CITQ sends you a list of criteria on which your establishment fell short of the desired classification level during the last classification visit.
- 2 You send the CITQ a written description of the proposed changes.
- 3 The CITQ processes the data you have provided using its planning software and sends you its estimate of the new classification resulting from the proposed changes.
- 4 If this does not produce the classification results you are seeking, the CITQ provides you with a list of criteria for which some extra effort is required so as to improve the likelihood of obtaining the desired results.

When this planning service is used before work begins, it will help you get the most out of your investment depending on your desired classification level.

WHAT DO CONSUMERS THINK ABOUT BONUS ELEMENTS IN HOTEL ESTABLISHMENT CLASSIFICATIONS?

The table below lists the five bonus elements most popular with survey respondents who travel mainly in Quebec and stay at 3- and 4-star hotels.

The preferences indicated by respondents looking for 2- or 5-star hotels or who don't care about the hotel's classification were not considered, since there were so few of them. No respondent travelling mainly in Quebec said that he or she looked for 1-star establishments.
